HIGH MOUNTAIN PASSES AND BROKEN TRAILS

The coastal mists are behind us. The mountain calls.

The low coastal mists of the Zaleeshee are gone, left behind in the rocky lowlands. The path before us now cuts straight through the steep ridges and unforgiving canyons of the interior, moving south at a desperate, unyielding pace.

Work on Book 3: Bad Moon is maintaining its momentum as our community continues to expand across the territory. The blueprints are set, the terrain is changing, and we are moving forward without looking back.

The circle around our campfire is growing larger with every single deployment. We are keeping this broadcast lean so you can get back to your own summer expeditions, but the forge remains hot.

Supplies for the Journey

Before you begin the long ascent into the southern mountain passes, you must fortify your inventory. A secure supply line has been established by our allied vanguard of dark fantasy creators to ensure your reading cache is fully stocked for the road ahead.

THE ARCHIVES: DEEP-DIVE WORLD BUILDING

Because we are keeping our monthly transmissions fast and streamlined through the summer season, the main library has been migrated. If your collection requires deeper lore, historical profiles, or detailed design notes from the Pacific Northwest creative logs, the vault is open.

Peruse the full chronicle of articles and design journals at your own pace:
